United States - monthly inflation rate in January 2022

Published by Statista Research Department, Feb 16, 2022

In January 2022, prices had increased by 7.5 percent compared to January 2021 according to the 12-month percentage of change in the consumer price index, respectively the monthly inflation rate for goods and services in the United States. The data represents U.S. city averages. In economics, the inflation rate is a measure of inflation, the rate of increase of a price index (in the below case: consumer price index). It is the percentage rate of change in price level over time. The rate of decrease in the purchasing power of money is approximately equal.

A projection of the annual U.S. inflation rate can be accessed here and the actual annual inflation rate since 1990 can be accessed here.

Inflation

One of the most important economic indicators is the development of the Consumer Price Index in a country. The change in this price level of goods and services is defined as the rate of inflation.

The annual inflation rate in the United States has increased from 3.2 percent in 2011 to 4.7 percent in 2021. This means that the purchasing power of the U.S. dollar has weakened in recent years. The purchasing power is the extent to which a person has available funds to make purchases.

According to the data published by the International Monetary Fund, the U.S. Consumer Price Index \(CPI\) was about 258.84 in 2020 and is forecasted to grow up to 298.06 in 2026, compared to the base period from 1982 to 1984.

The monthly percentage change in the Consumer Price Index \(CPI\) for urban consumers in the United States increased by 0.6 percent in January 2022 compared to the previous month.

Compared to other countries the U.S. inflation rate is relatively low. In 2020, Brazil for example had an inflation rate of 3.21 percent, compared to the previous year, while the inflation rate in China stood at 2.39 percent.

Need a professional mover? Experts say start looking early

One of the many professional moving companies in desperate need of truck drivers is offering extensive benefits plus a $100,000 salary for long-distance drivers.

INDIANAPOLIS — Like so many others, the professional moving industry is feeling the effects of a truck driver shortage.

"One of the biggest challenges we're seeing is driver recruiting and driver retention," said Chuck Kuhn, President and CEO of JK Moving and Storage Services, the nation's largest independent moving and storage company.

And it's hitting at a time when they've never been busier.

"We're seeing business volumes I've never seen in forty years," he told 13News.

Kuhn said he believes lower mortgage rates and the ability to work remotely have motivated people to pack up and move "all over the nation at a pace we've never seen before."

How badly do they need drivers?

"On top of our benefits packages, profit sharing, 401(k) and paid vacation, we're guaranteeing our long-distance drivers a minimum $100,000 a year salary," said Kuhn. "We have an immediate need to add 100 drivers, today. Literally, with the business volumes and growth we're seeing, we could add 100 drivers to our fleet and keep them busy today."

If you're planning to hire a moving company, experts suggest doing your research early.

Compare moving companies, get referrals, make sure your mover is licensed and insured, and it's always a good idea to check with the Better Business Bureau.
